Why are so many couples getting married in Italy?

When asked why they had got married in Italy, the couple from London I've interviewed explained that Italy has long been rightly considered one of the most romantic countries in the world: medieval hill towns set in gorgeous landscapes, bringing you back in time, and making you feel part of an ideal Renaissance painting.

They recalled the two of them walking hand in hand along Venice's canals, exploring Rome's ruins, where ancient history mingled with their own love story in a perfect scenario, their words were enough to make me want to make up my mind, and go!

They were thrilled by what Italy did to their five senses: nostrils tickled by the sweet scents of lemon groves and Mediterranean herbs; eyes lulled by the sight of gently rolling hills, shades of green and blue in appealing sea water, and famous works of art; skin caressed by the gentle sea breeze and balmy summer nights; ears enticed by warm sea waves overlapping on soft sandy beaches; and the food, the delicious Italian food, the generous Italian wines, made them want to forget of ever having tasted any pre-cooked food.

They decided to have a wedding coordinator take care of it all: Sandra Santoro at Getting Married in Italy, by Atlantis, agency based in Florence, provided them with the paperwork and assistance with legal formalities; she booked the ceremony, the reception, and all the related features; she was so professional and yet so warm and considerate that she made this event the most remarkable and unforgettable in their life.

All they had to do was choose whether they wished to get married in church or City Hall; they made up their mind on the beautiful Sala Rossa in Florence's Palazzo Vecchio, and Sandra reserved the photo and video service, flower decorations, music, horse and carriage; they decided to have their reception in a medieval castle, but villas, and exclusive restaurants are available as well. Sandra also assisted them in organising the itinerary for their honeymoon in Italy and Europe.
